“We’re thrilled to deepen our partnership with Centaur Asia Pacific, a testament to our joint commitment to excellence, customer satisfaction, loyalty, and innovation,” said Johan Setteryd, Chief Operating Officer at CapillaryFlow, an Associate Business Member of the Asian Golf Industry Federation.

“Centaur’s enthusiasm for investing in and implementing Capillary Hydroponics, coupled with their track record and extensive knowledge of both the golf and turf industry, significantly influenced our decision,” he added.

This collaboration will enhance the availability of CapillaryFlow’s cutting-edge solutions in the region and present an opportunity to strengthen the company’s foothold and expand its reach to a broader customer base.

Capillary Hydroponics is a revolutionary sub-surface irrigation system that utilises an oxygenated and fertilised moving underground water table to cultivate turfgrass in greens, tees, and fairways.

The proprietary system reduces water consumption by up to 85%, ensuring the growth of stronger, more durable turfgrass with markedly less maintenance and environmental impact.

We are honoured to be appointed as the exclusive distributor for CapillaryFlow in Australia and New Zealand,” said Danny Potter, Founder of Centaur Asia Pacific, a Full Business Member of the Asian Golf Industry Federation.

“Centaur is excited to contribute to the advancement of sustainable turf management practices in the region through CapillaryFlow’s ground-breaking innovations,” he added.
